

Dramatic Arts

Drama is probably the most inclusive and holistic art form. In performance it involves all aspects of the human being, including the voice, body, intellect, emotions, creativity and spirit, as well as all our social skills of interaction, communication, listening and empathy. It also draws the other art forms, using music and sound, movement and dance, visual arts and design, in performances in all media. When studying Drama, people often learn about aspects of life which form part of many other disciplines, including Sociology, Psychology, History, Politics, Economics, Architecture, Fashion, Language and Literature, Culture, Philosophy, Religion, Ethics and Multimedia. No wonder Drama is so much fun to do, to watch and be part of.

Doris Engelhardt, August 2016
HOD for Dramatic Arts